PRESIDENT'S GUARD IS FOUND ASLEEP

Two Marines Assigned To White Court Are Accused of Neglect

(Associated Press)

SWAMPSCOTT, August 24.—Two marines of the special detail assigned to guard the summer white house, were found asleep at their post of duty this morning. Charges of neglect of duty have been prepared against them and Captain Adolphus Andrews, the president's naval aide, has ordered an investigation.

Lieutenant Wright, in charge of the detail, inspected guard posts early this morning and it is understood he reported that one marine had left his post and another was asleep on duty. A detail of 18 marines has kept a 24-hour watch on White Court this summer, aiding secret service men in keeping a watch on the President.

Student Beaten To Death By Gangsters

CHICAGO, August 24.—A University of Chicago medical student was beaten to death and a companion slugged by gangsters yesterday, following a fancied insult to three sisters which was resented by the escort of the girls.

The slain student was John Henry Klassin, 25, of Mankato, Kan., a junior in the school of medicine and his companion, J. R. Mitcham, a son of A. T. Mitcham, wealthy oil operator of Fort Worth, Texas.

SNYDER CHARGES GRAND JURORS TO PROBE WHIPPINGS

Investigators Urged To Sift All Charges To The Very Bottom

JEFFERSON HAS MOST BEATINGS

Whippings Not Alone In One Camp But Are General, Judge Says

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., August 24.—Judge Roger Snyder today called upon the Jefferson county grand jury to "do its duty" as far as possible to "clear this county of the stigma which recent developments in the whipping of convicts has brought about."

He told the body it had authority to bring indictments for whipping, if the law had been violated.

Judge Snyder said: "Figuring the ratio of convicts whipped throughout the state, we find that for some reason or other, considering a certain time, there has been per convict 50 times as much whipping in Jefferson county as in the whole state put together. That makes the reputation of a Jefferson county convict 50 times as bad and unruly as a convict in some other part of the state."

"Such a situation is appalling. No decent man can contemplate it without a shudder of horror, shame and disgust. Who is to blame. It is up to this grand jury to find that out. I charge you it is your duty to go to the bottom of the matter and I suggest that in ferreting this matter, you visit every convict camp in this county and question the inmates as to the situation concerning their condition. Let every convict who comes know that he may feel to testify without the danger of being punished for it, and if it is brought to your attention that any efforts whatever are being made to thwart, in any manner, the investigation which you make, report the matter to me and I will see that the guilty ones serve a jail sentence for contempt."

"Gentlemen, this is your county. The whippings have not happened at one camp only. They have been general, evidently under a generally recognized method of handling human beings. As to your authority there is no question. You have also authority to indict for all whippings taking place in this jurisdiction. It is your duty to go as far as you can to clear this county of the stigma which recent development in this whipping business have attached to it."

Work Started On Lee Street Sewer

Work was started Monday by W. B. McCulloch, on the new Lee street sewer. Mr. McCulloch was awarded a contract for construction of the sewer by the Albany city council, in regular meeting Friday evening. The bid was for slightly more than $5,000. The construction of the new sewer is expected to do much toward relieving the flood conditions which occur periodically at the intersection of Lee and Ferry streets and Second avenue after heavy rainfalls.

Contract Signed For New Sewer

Following the negotiations of several days, an agreement was signed this morning by officials of Albany and Decatur to cover the matter of connection of the new Albany storm sewer on Lee street with the Decatur sewer beneath the Louisville and Nashville tracks.

HUNTSVILLE PLANS A HIGHWAY BRIDGE ACROSS THE RIVER

Committee Appointed By Civic Body To Consider Project

THREE PLANS ARE BEING CONSIDERED

Report Is Expected To Be Forthcoming Within Week

Another bridge across the Tennessee river, to replace the old Whitesburg ferry, is possible, as a result of a movement launched by the Huntsville chamber of commerce to obtain a bridge for that area.

According to the Huntsville Daily Times, three plans are under consideration now. The first provides for raising the necessary fund, estimated to be about $300,000, by popular subscriptions. The second would obtain state aid, and the third contemplates the creation of a corporation and the sale of stock.

The following committee has been named by the chamber of commerce to begin consideration of the three plans, with a view to recommending the most desirable one: Robert E. Spragins, M. M. Hutches, R. E. Smith, J. E. Pierce and C. M. Grace.

Immediate sessions by the committee are expected and a report probably will be forthcoming within a week, it is stated. The committee also plans to look into the ferry question at Whitesburg, with a view to making the transportation as serviceable as possible, pending the building of the bridge.

Huntsville has been spurred to action by the success of the Twin-Cities in obtaining a bridge across the Tennessee river at this point. Huntsville merchants estimate, it is said, that the lack of a bridge at Whitesburg is costing the business men of that city a quarter of a million dollars a year.

Huntsville also has started a movement for the canalization of Big Spring branch from the spring, within the heart of Huntsville, to the Tennessee river.

IT IS explained that Belgium's easy terms in debt settlement are based on the fact that Woodrow Wilson, exceeding his authority and ignoring the power of congress in making treaties, fixed his signature to certain papers, thus binding the United States.

WOODROW WILSON'S signature, without congressional authorization, bound the United States not at all. And it establishes a dangerous precedent, when an illegal act, even on the part of a glorious war president, inflated with enthusiasm, is accepted as binding on this country.

WE MIGHT have another president, wandering around Europe in the role of world saviour, and heaven knows what he might do, putting the United States under obligations to foreign nations. Treat Belgium kind, by all means, but don't recognize, even semi-officially, the binding character of

EYES OF NATION ON THE SOUTHLAND NOW

New York Wholesalers Predict Biggest Fall Business

The eyes of the nation, particularly in the New York sections, are turned on the South now, declared Spencer Garnett, local merchant, on his return from New York.

Mr. Garnett declared that wholesalers there, while predicting a record business during the coming fall, expect great things of the South particularly. They call attention to the fact that Southern railroads now are paying the greatest dividends of any railroads in the country, indicating heavy freight shipments in Dixie. Crop conditions are good, construction is going on at an increased pace and Mr. Garnett found New York very enthusiastic over the future outlook in the South.

CONFERENCE TO BE OPENED IN DECATUR CITY HALL AT 3:30

Twin City Officials To Meet Members of Utility Board

COURT'S LIMIT OF TIME EXPIRES

Today the Last One For Seeking Agreement. On Rate Hike

Members of the Alabama public service commission are scheduled to arrive here this afternoon on Louisville and Nashville train number two, from the south, to go into conference immediately with officials of Albany and Decatur in regard to the water rates in the municipalities. The meeting will be held in the Decatur city hall.

The conference here today, between the commission and officials of the cities, was arranged late Saturday afternoon over long distance telephone, by A. G. Patterson, chairman of the public service commission, who pointed out that today was the last day given by the federal court for an effort to be made to bring about an agreement on rates here.

It will be recalled that after applying for permission to increase the rates in the Twin Cities, the Alabama Water company took the case into the federal court and received a temporary injunction restraining the commission and the attorney general from interfering with collection of the increased rates. At a subsequent hearing in Birmingham, the court, with three federal judges sitting, ordered the parties involved to attempt an agreement, and if they failed, the case will be taken up again by the court.

Just what the outcome of the conference here this afternoon will be could not be forecast today. There was a well defined opinion on the part of some, however, that the cities might insist on the old rate, which probably would have the result of throwing the case back into the federal court, with a resultant re-valuation of all the properties of the water company.

Railroad Earnings Reach High Peak

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Maintenance of freight traffic at unusually high levels, coupled with the recent series of favorable financial reports by carriers, has inspired estimates in the financial district that railway earnings for 1925 will closely approach the record of $1,400,000,000, established in 1913. Profits for the second half of the year are expected to be much larger than for the first six months when net operating incomes of the class one railroads totalled $437,668,257.

August 24 falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

At least one man believed that the law would take its course. Scotty Allison killed himself rather than face a jury, though he was only a suspect.

The cuts in gasoline announced from day to day apparently do not bother local retailers. Gas is just as precious as it ever was, with the law "get all you can, while you can," still prevailing.

Political races are about as thrilling as a six-day bicycle grind, just an ordinary race traveled by interesting people with the winner a fagged out candidate at the end.

The first great power turbine has turned at Wilson Dam, the first realization of long cherished hope has come—people of the Shoals district now are beginning to realize the value of faith and the honesty of purpose.

Thirty-eight farmers plan to be here next Thursday at the Kiwanis Farm Night meet. We anticipate that double that number will be present on that night and we want the agriculturists of North Alabama to know that they are doubly welcome to these cities and the advantages offered here.

Arthur Brisbane, world renowned editorial writer, evidently believes Miss Gertrude Ederle could perform feats greater than swimming the English channel. First, that writer criticized the swimmer for her apparent lack of womanly instinct and now he is aroused because Miss Ederle ate too heartily before her long swim. Miss Ederle has her own life to live just as much as the editor, but like all other public figures she must take her criticisms along with her glories, a mixture of bitters and sweets.

DECATUR TAKES ANOTHER PROGRESSIVE AND WORTHWHILE STEP TO THE FRONT

Within the past few months the city of Decatur, through the aldermanic board, has set a rapid pace in street building and the resurfacing of thoroughfares in the city. The pace has been hot enough to crowd out even the larger cities of the South, so determined has the board been to show the outside world that the city of Decatur looks forward and not backward and that this section is preparing for the advent of prosperity, the coming of new industries, the increasing tourist trade that grows with the years. A step was taken during the past week by the Decatur city council that is worthy of commendation.

The board decided that the building of a street running from west Vine along Sycamore and up into Church street will increase the value of property in that section, but an increase in property values was not the object of the board.

For many years the pedestrian and the traveler by automobile, who is often not familiar with local conditions, has been endangered in the crossing of the Southern railway tracks on Vine street. Buildings loom up on either side of the tracks and it is almost an impossibility to see an oncoming train from either approach. By the paving of Sycamore and Church streets, the city has eliminated the danger of the railway crossing. It has not only put the mind of the traveler at rest, but the move has undoubtedly aided the Southern railway who would possibly have to pay damages to anyone who might fail to see safety signals and dash into the danger zone un-mindful of the conditions. Some will continue to cross at the railway intersection of Vine street, but a far greater number will be glad to take the Church street route. The council has made a splendid move in the paving of that section.

ACTION ON THE AVENUE QUESTION CREATES WIDESPREAD INTEREST

Friday night witnessed one of the longest council meetings ever held in the city of Albany. The board of aldermen came early and stayed late in an effort to clean up a part of the problems of the city. They succeeded in part for they laid a foundation for the payment of the bridge bond issue when it comes due, they prepared final plans for the building of a Lee street sewer line to run into the Decatur lines and relieve the flooded area of Lee and Ferry streets when the clouds become too generous with moisture.

Probably the largest item that was taken up Friday night was that of the paving or repaving of Second avenue. The council got underway in record time and has already received estimates on the work from the city engineer. They also had a long talk from a paving authority on what method is best for adoption. The matter has been shelved for the time being, waiting for a consultation with the property owners on what type of paving they desire, which is entirely right. They are going to foot the bill and they should certainly be consulted on the kind of product that their money will buy.

In the meantime, however, let us hope that constabulations with the owners will not take up too long a time and that the repair of the Avenue may be pushed ahead of all other city legislation. Repair of the principal Albany street is one of the most important steps that the city council can take at this time. We have hundreds of other matters that seem to be just as pressing, but the pedestrian, the automobile driver, the merchant, the shopper, the business man, is interested in the paving of this street. Let us not wait any longer.

The Albany council is showing a most progressive spirit in thus beginning the movement for the improvement of Second avenue and the citizenship at large is very hopeful that the improvement will be an accomplished fact within a short time.

THE WRITER IS ON THE RIGHT TRACK, BUT HAS TAKEN THE WRONG TRAIL

One of the most interesting and amusing articles seen by this writer for sometime has been clipped from the columns of the Louisville & Nashville Employees magazine, August issue. The writer in that periodical is decrying the use of big and cumbersome words. He undoubtedly fears to meet the man who delves in the dictionary at night that he might create an impression the next day that he is learned, versed in literary materials, and above all, about the most important personage in the city. He forgets that he is to be dubbed an "awful booby" by all the common sense people with whom he comes in contact.

The magazine submitted the following:
"One of the editors of this publication, prowling around in an attic, found in addition to cobwebs and dust an unsigned typewritten sheet containing these words of wisdom:

"In promulgating your esoteric cogitations or in articulating superficial sentimentalities and philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversation possess clarified conciseness, compacted comprehensiveness, scalescent consistency and coatinated cogency. Eschew all conglomeration, flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous decantations and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility without rhodomontade or thrausonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabical profundity, pompous prolixity and ventriloquial verbosity. Shun double entendre and prurient jocosity, whether obscure or apparent. In other words, speak truthfully, naturally, clearly, purely. Don't use big words."

Above all, "Don't use big words." People this day and time haven't the spare moments to attempt to delve into the mysteries of speech. Folks want you to sit down with them quietly and "spill it." Revert to slang expression and you have incurred the undying hatred of those who preach of a love for refinement, but remember that you are reaching the American public when you do so. Half of the American fadom, attending a baseball game today get more "kick" out of hearing the umpire yell, "Strike Tuh" than they get out of watching some sparkling play on the diamond. Writers can reach a vast audience with the words of common usage, whereas if they adopted the aloof idea that big words convey, they are minus an audience and in many instances, a job.

ANDREW PATTERSON'S ENTRANCE IN THE RACE INTERESTS THE NORTH

Honorable A. G. Patterson, who still maintains that his home is in Albany-Decatur and will be forevermore, no matter where his arduous tasks may take him, has at last decided to enter the gubernatorial campaign for the highest honor that Alabama can bestow upon her native sons. Mr. Patterson's announcement carries weight in the northern section of Alabama and has revived interest in state politics.

H. G. Carmichael has likewise announced from the Tusculumbia district, but Mr. Carmichael's effort at the chief executive chair is not looked upon with the interest so much as the entrance of Mr. Patterson in the race.

For many years, now, Mr. Patterson has stood daily before the people of Alabama defending them against the corporation inroads on the private purse of the public. He has been termed a defender of the people, the mediator, a barricade against the constant poundings of the corporations for more money, higher rates, greater returns.

We do not believe that there is a single instance, either before or during the public life of Mr. Patterson, that he has failed to keep faith with the people of the state. He has ever proved his worth to them as a public official. He has served the people as they should be served at all times. Mr. Patterson has not held the leadership of the public service commission as many other officials hold state offices. Hundreds of leaders in public life hold their places as they see fit and not according to the wishes of the people.

Mr. Patterson has served the interests of the people and not in unfairness to the corporations of the state. His honest endeavor has been to give the corporations and the people a fair and square deal and we do not feel that he has failed.

We believe that the northern section of the state, the section which Mr. Patterson claims as his home, the finest district in Alabama, will support Mr. Patterson wholeheartedly. Mr. Carmichael is a splendid gentleman and will, no doubt receive a part of the vote of the northern district, but Mr. Carmichael cannot show the record that Mr. Patterson has to offer and he has not had the actual training that the Albany-Decatur man has had.

We do not speak of other candidates in the race for we feel that Mr. Patterson and Mr. Carmichael are going to fight it out in the northern section for the governorship. Mr. Patterson will receive a flattering vote from South Alabama counties, he will have able aides in Central Alabama and he can show the people of North Alabama that he is the man for the place. We present to you for next governor of Alabama, Andrew Patterson, a man who is in the open fighting for the interests of the people, a brilliant mind, a statesman, a North Alabamian with a progressive and aggressive platform. We will support him not solely as a North Alabamian, but as a man who considers the wishes of the people, a man who cannot be swayed from the path of justice when the big stick of the corporation rule is being swung.

Our good friends down town may rest assured that we not only appreciate the fact that they are going to have a magnificent bridge across the Tennessee river at that point but we are ready and willing at all times to help them grow and prosper. Also in order to help this part of the great Muscle Shoals district blossom and grow to the largest possible development, our people in addition to providing adequate publicity funds, have decided to throw a bridge across the Tennessee river at Whitesburg Harbor, ten miles south of Greater Huntsville, the territory north and south of that point to enjoy liberal development and improvement.

We are glad to have the outside communities focus their eyes this way and the quicker we can get our community in the national show window the earlier will we be able to shove our city out yonder 25 miles within the next twelve months.—Huntsville Daily Times.

"TIME at length makes all things even," even for poor Uncle Tom. He will appear in a British musical comedy version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin. And what Harriet Beecher Stowe would think about it, you may decide.

In the musical comedy, Uncle Tom will shoot Legree stone dead, after which he will dance the Charleston to the tune of "Them Cotton Pickin' Blues." Eliza and the bloodhounds chasing her over the ice will be cut out. The last scene will show Uncle Tom, with a big cake, at a wedding.

That performance will be equalled by the British manager determined to produce Shakespeare with actors in modern clothing. Hamlet in a "Tuxedo" would match Uncle Tom shooting degree.

SCIENTISTS have unearthed the tomb of a king of the Mayas, running over Mexico and other lands centuries before Columbus made his trip.

Pictures of the king, and his high priestess, are found in the tomb. Four columns which once held up a king's body, and a few human bones, are scattered about the floor. Those bones were once the skeleton holding up a mighty king.

"I am Ozymandias, king of kings, look upon my words, ye mighty ones, and tremble.

HOW STRANGE, to that old Mayan king, would seem the men that now look upon his crumbling bones.

What sort of beings, in ages to come, will uncover our cities of today, decipher our books, read accounts of our wars with poison gases and say "very much like the wolves, but rather more intelligent.

JOHN M'CORMACK, Irish tenor retiring at fifty, nine years hence, if he does not change his mind, will live in Ireland, in the Curragh of Kildare, says this popular singer. "I emphatically refuse to broadcast."

That is foolish in two ways. It diminishes McCormack's usefulness. He should be proud to be heard by millions. And it cuts down his income, which comes from talking machine records, more than concerts.

BROADCASTING would increase the demand for records, millions would want to hear, over and over, at will, the voices heard on the radio. That statement is not based on any guess. Hugh Grant Straus, the great Brooklyn firm, Abraham and Straus, told this writer that following the only occasion on which McCormack sang for the radio, there was an unprecedented rush to buy records of his voice, lasting more than a week. That should interest Mr. Johnson, who controls records by McCormack and many other greater singers. Milan, says the human brain sends out radio waves that travel a long distance. That may be. The human brain is certainly a receiving station for inspiration coming from afar.

CAZZAMALI adds that brain waves can be harnessed, arranged on a code basis and used for communication at a distance, from brain to brain. That is interesting, pseudo-scientific non-sense.

THE transmission of thought requires speech, word by mouth, or letters forming speech ticked out on some instrument. If Cazzamali were right it would have been waste of time to create man as a speaking animal, living in a material world.

The whole thing might have been done by waves, but, force cannot act without matter, the brain cannot function without force and matter as its instruments. That is why we are sent down to this material plane, to do, to be, and to suffer.

THE Harriman-Lorce plan for a shorter New York to Chicago route would cut running time four hours, and distance 200 miles.

Perhaps this will move the Santa Fe to cut a few hours off the running time to California. It could easily be shortened by a day, from coast to coast without any new route.

HOWEVER, by the time shorter railroads are built, airline flying routes will make them superfluous, except for freight. Within this generation long journeys, except by air will be past history.

ORGANS OF ABDOMEN MUST FUNCTION

But They Cannot Do So Properly If One Is Misplaced, As Is Likely to Happen If the Large Intestine Is Overburdened.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

NATURE has done wonderful things in building the body and planning for its safety and preservation. If man would do his part in guarding against disease by proper treatment of this wonderfully constructed mechanism, the span of life would be materially increased.

The abdominal cavity is an important region. It is divided from the chest cavity, containing the heart and lungs, by the diaphragm. This is a firm muscular wall which you never think of till you have the hiccoughs. Then it takes on a violent spasm and makes you painfully aware of its existence.

Within the abdominal cavity are the organs which have to do with digestion, notably the stomach, liver, gall bladder and intestines. The spleen is here, too, and just outside the main cavity are the kidneys.

Immediately connected with the abdominal cavity and really a part of it, is the space bounded by the pelvis, the bones of the middle of the body. In this cavity is the bladder, and, in women, it contains the generative organs—the uterus and ovaries.

The mere recital of this list of vital organs show how necessary it is to protect this region against neglect and abuse.

Man has a posture different from the lower animals. He stands upright. This places a peculiar strain upon the tissues which hold the organs in place. Some of the organs are heavy, notably heavy a times. This makes them liable to sag and to become displaced.

The "colon" is the name given the large intestine, the most dependent part of the intestinal tract. Since a part of the colon runs upward and another part runs downward, we need not consider these portions in connection with sagging, but the middle part, called the "transverse colon," runs crosswise of the body. This position renders it peculiarly liable to sagging or drooping and even to rolling upon its axis, producing a kink in the intestine. Since the colon is frequently quite filled with the waste products of digestion, it may become so heavy that the supports give way.

There is a general term applied to the condition and to the symptoms resulting from relaxation and stretching of the natural support of the digestive organs within the abdominal cavity. This is "enteroptosis," or drooping of the viscera, the organs are called. Evidence of the kidney or of the uterus may be met. Indeed, any of the organs may become displaced through neglect, disease, or as the result of accident. Discomfort is the chief symptom. There may be dragging pains in the back. Sometimes there are no apparent symptoms, but, of course, a misplaced organ is not an efficient organ. On this account any form of enteroptosis requires the attention of your doctor.

Manufacturer Is Held For Robbery

(Associated Press)

DAYTON, O., Aug. 24.—Fred Nichols, Dayton manufacturer, was arrested by detectives today and is said to have admitted to them he is the blue masked, blue robed phantom bandit who, on August 14, held up and robbed employees of the North Dayton branch of the Dayton Savings bank and trust company, escaping with $28,000 the police announced this morning.

Nichols, who is president of a local manufacturing concern, bearing his name, told detectives he turned robber because of financial difficulties.

The Bible—A Code of Morals

The statement of Jesse B. Head of the Montgomery county school board, in which he opposes the Alabama law requiring the reading of Bible without comment in the public schools upon the ground that it is a violation of the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom, or a giving offense to those persons who are of religious belief is based upon the Bible—one or all of reasons—loses sight of the fact that the Bible is not a sectarian book, a code of morals so generally applied for its excellence that its teachings form the basis of the jurisprudence of every civilized Western people.

No one will dispute Mr. Head's assertion that Protestants, Catholics, Jews, and persons of no religious convictions, have an equal right in public schools. But granting that this right does not clothe them with the additional right to special consideration because of peculiar creeds or dogmas to which they subscribe, no more so than that we should change our American system of representative government because of socialists, communists, syndicalists, anarchists among our citizenry their particular systems better.

This American nation of ours has always been a Bible-reading nation and being such, has given the fine example of a just, chivalrous and noble people. Up to a few decades ago it was the universal custom to read the Bible in the schools, until the great streams of alien peoples began to reach our shores there any serious move toward pressing this American custom Bible-reading in the schools, and the Bible began to disappear from schools then it was that legislation was sought to have it restored—to teach sectarianism, but to inculcate those wholesome lessons of morality without which no civilization survive.

Mr. Justice Brown, speaking of the supreme court of Texas in a brought by individuals against reading the Bible in a certain school, said:

"There is no difference in the taction given by our constitution between citizens of this state of count of religious beliefs; all are braced in its broad language and entitled to protection guarantee thereby; but it does not follow one or more individuals have the right to have the courts deny the people privilege of having their children instructed in the moral truths of the Bible because such objects do not sate that their own children shall participate therein. This would be to starve the moral and spiritual tures of the many out of deference to the few."

Pirates Now Seem Safely "In" As They Break Even With The Giants

Some 50,000 pop-eyed baseball bugs in New York, to say nothing of the thousands elsewhere are inclined to believe today that there really is something in the tradition that "history never repeats." Only a year or two back, the Pittsburgh Pirates went to New York in late August, enjoying a seven game lead in the National league. The Giants very promptly bumped the Pirates in four straight games and so demoralized the Smoky City clan, they could not regain their feet until after the Giants had swept past them into another pennant and the spoils of another world's series.

Fans held their breath, wondering if the same thing would happen on the current visit of the Pirates to the Giant stronghold. The Pirates, however ran roughshod over their opponents Saturday, winning a double bill and split even in yesterday's double-decker, insuring them an even break in the series, even if they lose Monday's single contest.

New York failed to take advantage of her opportunity and the experts are predicting now that the Pirates are as good as "in."

Over in the American loop the Athletics and Senators continue their dog-fall. Both won again Sunday.

It looks like the pennant dash will be continued right on down the home stretch. American club owners are gleeful, while no doubt there is a look of gloom on the face of some National magnates. A close finish in the American will mean big money to the younger league. The series between the Giants and Pirates netted a fortune to the owners of both clubs but it settles the pennant issue, the interest of the fans will turn to the American; and the turnstiles of the latter will elick with much more regularity for nothing thrills the American baseball follower like a whale of a battle for a flag. The winning as Goldberg remarks, "may not mean anything," but the fan likes a fight and the league that gives it to him gets his money.

The thud of cleated foot against pigskin was scheduled to be heard on Cooper-Wells field this afternoon as the candidates for the Louisville and Nashville shop team get their preliminary workout. Football fans of Albany-Decatur and neighboring sections are due considerable appreciation to those who have made this team possible, for a feature card has been arranged for the fall months. In the absence of a first class prep school team here, local fans have failed to see many of the better prep and secondary college squads in action. The schedule of the Ellenen combination this year gives local fans a chance to see the best in action.

The thing for the fan to do this season is to see that the year is a financial success. If it is, an even better schedule will be arranged for next season. No one knows yet how far this thing of industrial football will go. It is a comparatively new idea in football. Here in this section are pioneers. The fan should help those who are blazing the trail.

now. Duane says she was enthusiastic about the demonstration. "Who gave her the demonstration?" "He did."

"I should think," Jerry's voice was as soft as to be almost inaudible, "I should think the salesmen would do that."

"They do ordinarily. But she had talked to him on the floor, several times, and asked him particularly to take her out. So of course he did."

Jerry had lost her appetite for dinner. Her thoughts were running along a new line.

"Myrtle Ingersoll and I went to a matinee Wednesday," she said slowly. "She wanted to come by the office and ask you to go with us."

"Ask who?"

"Ten, father. She thinks you are such a dear. I told her you are a perfect slave to business and never go out in the afternoon, and she wanted to come by and ask you anyhow, thought you might be pleased with the attention. I didn't think anything of it then. But I'm thinking plenty now."

Jerry laughed easily. "Oh, they think up miller excuses than that to get a look at him. Not that I blame them at all! There aren't enough good-looking young fellows to go the rounds here, you know."

"It had not before occurred to Jerry to wonder what Duane was doing during the evening, with whom he was going out, what friendships he was forming. Now that this phase of the situation was so forcibly drawn to her attention, she realized very clearly that in a town the size of Des Moines, a young man of good appearance, who could dance, play bridge, and with great personal charm to his credit, was not at all likely to pass by unobserved."

And if further corroboration were necessary, she received it in painful plenty on Monday evening at Grace McCartney's shower for Rae Forsythe, when all the girls of their particular clique were together. Jerry was late in arriving, and was greeted at once with a gay protesting outburst.

"Oh, Jerry, how could you be so selfish!"

"Jerry Harmer, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! Anything as good-looking as that!"

"Where in the world did your father find it?"

Jerry realized it would be foolish to pretend ignorance as to their meaning. In a town as small and as fraternal as Des Moines. She laughed it off as best she could, explained gayly that she left the management of the Harmer Motor to her father, and agreed that Duane Allerton was certainly a very handsome thing.

"Do you know him, Jerry?" asked Edith Weatherby.

"Yes, I met him in New York."

This was greeted with merry, significant exclamations and laughter.

"Oh, so it's like that!" they cried. "No wonder!"

"It seems he had some sort of financial reverses," she went on quickly. "I don't know much about it, but he wanted to make a change, and you know father is always taking on men."

"Do you like him, Jerry?" persisted Edith Weatherby.

Jerry was not to be caught unguarded. "Of course. Why not? I hardly knew the man."

"And you're not personally interested, are you?" continued her interrogator. "Because he told me he had lost a lot of money, and I told father—father likes him very much—and I told father I was sure he would rather work in a bank than in a factory. You know my father is always taking on men, too."

Jerry's eyes were serene and unclouded. "Yes, of course. That would be lovely for Mr. Allerton. I am sure his opportunity would be much greater in the bank than with my father."

More than ever Jerry regretted that heavy impulse of hers which had brought Duane Allerton to Iowa. And yet she took a bitter, morbid satisfaction in having them know that after all she had known him first, that she had been in a sense the motive of his coming—as, indeed, she had, and in a far more intimate sense than Jerry would have them suspect.

On the evening of Thanksgiving occurred the annual dinner-dance at the club, one of the real events of the year to which the younger set at least looked forward for weeks with keen anticipation. Usually Jerry made one of a group of her particular friends while Prudence and Jerrold filled up a table with couples of their own age and interests. But, for this night, Jerry persistently refused all invitations, and insisted on a family trio: Prudence, Jerrold and herself. To her friends she said she thought her mother would like it. To Prudence she said honestly:

"Oh, mother, I'm tired! I don't feel like pretending to be interested in a lot of things—when I am not."

On the afternoon of the dance she sat curled in a big chair before the fire with a magazine she did not read, and Jerrold sat opposite her with the evening paper, smoking, and neither of them answered when Prudence reminded them for the third time that they must hurry and dress. Finally at her insistence, Jerrold dropped the paper and sighed.

"I'm getting too old for such goings on," he said plaintively. "I feel just like sitting here in my own house by my own fire, and going to bed at a respectable hour."

"Too late," Prudence told him, laughing. "You hate to go or you get no dinner. Mary and Katie have gone out, and there is nothing to eat. You must go with us or fast."

Jerrold sighed again. Then he turned to Jerry, with the news that had been a burden to him for two days.

A Mistake that some beauty seekers are making They are misled on "olive and palm" soaps

Do you realize, Madam, that "olive and palm" soaps are ages and ages old? But never has one, before Palmolive, brought comparable results to the skin.

Palmolive Soap is a masterpiece, based on 60 years of soap study. It is a scientific creation, made to bring new beauty to the skin. Made to keep schoolgirl complexions.

Its unique results have led millions to adopt it. Now it is made in five countries, to supply the world-wide demand. It is made in France, because French women find in this their ideal of a soap.

Soft, velvety complexions are many times as common as they were before Palmolive came. Then don't accept ordinary "olive and palm" soaps, with artificial color, and often super-fatted.

Palmolive costs 10 cents—no more than the price of most ordinary soaps. But that is due to enormous production. Palmolive has become the leading toilet soap of the world. The only two soaps we know that fairly compare with it cost 25 cents per cake.

This warning is in your interest. There is a way to keep youthful complexions, and multitudes have found it. But that way is not a mere "olive and palm" soap. It is found in Palmolive alone.

Note the unnatural "too green" color of Palmolive imitators. What does that suggest? Men don't paint nature to improve it.

Olive and palm oils—nothing else—give Palmolive its delicate, natural color. Olive and palm oils—no other fats whatsoever—are used in Palmolive.

No "super-fattening," no "super-anything"—the only secret to Palmolive is its blending. And that is judged one of the world's priceless beauty secrets.

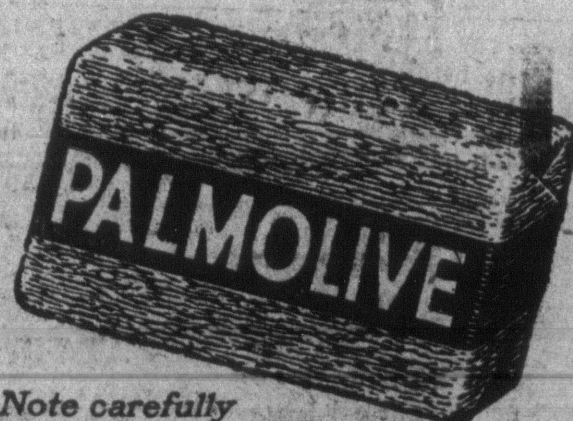

Let no one convince you—for your own sake—that any ordinary type of "olive and palm" soap can bring you Palmolive results.

Wash, launder, cleanse with any soap you wish. But when beauty is at stake—take care. Use Palmolive, nature's formula to "Keep That Schoolgirl Complexion."

IN PARIS

French women are discarding
French soaps for Palmolive

Palmolive is today one of the two greatest selling toilet soaps in France. Parisian beauties are happy to pay almost twice as much for a cake of Palmolive as American women pay. And, in many cases, three times as much as for their own French soaps. Remember this when tempted by costly French soaps, or by "French" claims for soaps.

Note carefully
the name and wrapper.
Palmolive is never sold unwrapped.
